Macroeconomic Indicators

Key external drivers that affect the engineering and construction industry in Canada include the value of non-residential construction (expenditures on office buildings, hospitals, factories, power plants, mining shafts, communication lines, farms, railroads, and schools), aggregate private investment (investment in gross fixed capital formation and inventories), government expenditure and investment (the total value of services produced by federal, provincial, and local governments as well as investment in fixed assets), and the interbank overnight lending rate in Canada. Aggregate private investment is expected to make up for lost ground, as programs such as the Investing in Canada Plan spurs increased infrastructure spending. This new investment should create an uptick in demand for industry operator services.
